A second film, Boonie Bears: Mystical Winter, was released in 2015. Plot On a stormy night, thugs Maurice and Arnold crash their vehicle in a tree when monkey Lord Tiki and his sidekick Babu are forced them to swerve off the road on the mountain, and a yellow suitcase slides out of the wreck. Meanwhile, logger Vick put his new lumbering tools to test, spooking the Bear Brothers - Briar and Bramble - into pursuit, and successfully steal the tool crate from Vick. Maurice and Arnold scramble to recover the case, but are steamrolled by the bears and escape. When Maurice and Arnold find out that the yellow suitcase was stolen by the bears, they are determined to find out who stole it. On the way, Maurice and Arnold are kidnapped from a police alert on TV, he set off to find the authorities and return her. The baby's interference causes Vick's pickup to behave erratically, alerting a police officer and getting the truck stuck. After freeing his vehicle with a scarecrow and securing her with tape, he was mistaken as the culprit by the officer pursuing him. Attempting to explain his circumstances and cut off the tape, the baby bites Vick, who inadvertently launches his knife into the officer. Now a wanted criminal, Vick barely escapes pursuit in his slightly crippled vehicle. Enraged by the trouble she warranted, Vick seals his house and angrily scolds her for trashing his place. Instead of silencing the baby, her cries penetrate the entire forest. He later successfully pacifies her with a water gun, and learns her nickname "Lola" while washing her suit. Gradually, he becomes a fatherly figure to her. On a bicycle, Vick sets off to procure supplies for Lola when they are running short, only to be arrested by the officer. Maurice and Arnold happen to be illegally attaching missing person posters nearby in an effort to find Lola. Stopping to warn them, the officer is knocked out by the duo and they steal his patrol car. In the ensuing scuffle, Vick sneaks away undetected. Suspecting Vick in possession of threatening gizmos, Briar invades Vick's house with Bramble, but the mission goes off-course when Bramble is injured by a falling log. Maurice and Arnold are alerted by the police and find out that the yellow suitcase was stolen by the bears. They are determined to find out who stole it. On the way, Maurice and Arnold are terrified by her appearance, having almost zero contact with humans other than Vick. They warm up to each other quickly and begin to hang out. Vick, who was devastated when he discovers his house ransacked by bears, was relieved to have Lola gone. His past animosity against them gets the better of him in a nightmare, and he storms off to rescue her, unaware of the events occurred in his absence. The bears and Vick have a tense standoff and brief scuffle inside the tree while Lola suddenly succumbs to a fever, forcing Vick to rush her home. The brothers attempt to help Vick also, with Bramble inadvertently thwarting Vick's truck. Maurice and Arnold, after repeated failures, are sent back to the city. When Maurice and Arnold are sent back to the city, Maurice and Arnold decide to take matters into his own hands. Vick and the Bears come to an alliance with Lola's presence as the three constantly organize activities to entertain her, with the former even constructing an aerial bicycle while the bears follow them around in Vick's truck. Soon, mercenaries appear and attempt to capture Lola. While Vick attempts to lodge them, Briar and Bramble make use of their prototype and appropriate enemy equipment to fight off the mercenaries. fails to evict Briar due to the latter's extreme mass. As they approach a chimney, at Vick's urging, they all bail and land safely in a towering industrial water tank moments before the collision. The CEO, having survived and clinging on a parachute, swears revenge at them but was cornered by a group of responding officers. With the true mastermind imprisoned and Lola rescued, Vick was exonerated and declared a hero for his part, with everyone returning to their normal lives, though he remains confused to the chain of events that occurred. Disturbed by his boss Mr. Li in a snowy morning, an irritated Vick promises to continue supplying timber. As he hangs up, Vick discovers a parcel mailed to his doorstep. Inside, he discovers various repaired items photographs of Lola with the old man who adopted her, as well the reconstructed letter, in which he proclaims her importance to him as he was dying. Just when Vick finishes the letter with a tear to his eye, he was delighted to see the bears bringing Lola in celebration of the Chinese New Year.

Characters

Vick A failing lumberjack, Vick was pressured constantly by work but also pestered by local fauna hostile to his efforts. He strives to survive but often makes little progress. Lola An orphaned, innocent, mute and illiterate toddler adopted by a kind old man. Briar The brains of the bear brothers and protector of the forest. The benevolent Briar leads a peaceful life with his brother, displaying force when his loved ones come under threat. Bramble The brawn of the bear brothers. Though dim-witted and gluttonous, Bramble terrorizes his foes with brute force and works with his older brother in their endeavors. Tiki A self-proclaimed ruler of the forest barely recognized by other creatures. Babu Tiki's loyal monkey servant. Lola's Grandfather The benevolent deceased father of the current CEO. Implied to seek wealth as much as his son in the past, Lola renewed his perspective and brought benevolence back to him yet again. Lola's Uncle The CEO of his corporation and son of his predecessor. Bonding well with his father in the past, their relations deteriorated in the pursuit of fortune. He is bent on retaking his lost fortune with the help of Maurice and Arnold, of which he believed belongs to him rightfully. Policeman A recurring officer who comically and ironically fails at his job. Arnold Maurice' brutish and menacing sidekick that often unsuccessfully helps Maurice. Maurice A cunning gangster roaming with Arnold as henchmen for hire. Box office The film had grossed RMB 103 million (US$17 million) at the Chinese box office three days after being released. It had the highest-grossing opening weekend for a Chinese animated film and the third highest-grossing opening day for any animated film at the Chinese box office.[3] More than a week after being released, it had grossed CN¥183 million (US$30.3 million). It is the highest grossing Chinese animated film in the country, beating the record previously held by Mission Incredible: Adventures on the Dragon's Trail.[4] English dub Rick Jay Glen as Briar / Ted Marshall Jr. / Ted Marshall Sr. / Arnold / Babu / Vick's Father / additional voices Justin J.
